

THROUGH AMPLITUDES OF THE MILITARY PROFESSION EVOLUTION

Albert Mullai

" Rarely the fighting positions failed because they are destroyed, normally because leaders have the self-determination that this position shouldn't continue to be maintained.." <sup>1</sup>.

A. A. Vandergrift

ABSTRACT

Currently nowadays we are living at a time when the meaning of the term "profession" is related essentially and conceptually to the rapid and profound transformational changes that taking place in the Armed Forces everywhere, and of course also to the Albanian AF. In this regard, even the comments, debate or ideas on this subject would do nothing but resonate with the intensity and variety of today's engagements, as well as facing the challenges that tomorrow brings to our Armed Forces, as an integral part of society. The "military profession" as a notion is as early as the Armed Forces itself. While believing that the profession of the military comes with the same parameters as all other professions, it rarely raises discussions, opinions, ideas, debates, proposals, and at the same time presents extremely controversial limits that naturally reflect in the conceptual field. "In this line, maybe we ourselves often lie in the mist of the debate without being able to cope with the pressure to regain value"<sup>2</sup>.

---

<sup>1</sup> Roderick R. Magee, "Building Strategic Leadership for the 21st Century," Military Review, February 1993, 39.

<sup>2</sup> "The indirect approach" Robert H. Scales, 1998